George struggled with a headache since he woke up with the strange itchy wounds on his ankle. He didn't pay much attention to them and just took them to be caused by mosquitoes or something similar and trivial.

Only when the itchiness intensified at evening did George sigh in annoyance as he decided to help himself with the issue. He pulled up his pant leg only to wince when he saw the irritated skin. It was slightly discoloured and had two symmetrical bite marks on it.

George shook his head and ran towards his toilet to disinfect the wound, thinking that the slightly green skin was caused by an infection of sorts. Before the man even managed to reach his destination he felt the skin on his leg harden and split into hundreds of tiny plates or rather scales.

George noticed it and clenched his teeth in distress and uncertainty about what the changes signalled. He had never seen a similar health issue before, not even in the TV.

As George continued to ponder about this the changes intensified and started spreading all over his body. The scaly and sickly coloured skin started covering more of the man's body until both of his legs got covered in it.

If not for the changes happening to his feet he would've already got back to moving. George slowly looked down and his heartbeat quickened in the rightful fear of the changes. The man gasped as he noticed that his toenails were just gone and his toes looked strange as if they continued to change and shrink into less defined shapes.

He leaned against the wall and started shivering in cold sweat, which led to him getting undressed out of blue. The man knew that he would just panic more after revealing all the other changes, but at the same time he was bizarrely curious about them in a way. He wanted to know exactly what was happening to his body.

He threw his shirt off himself and grimaced when he noticed that his chest was getting covered in lighter coloured scales. At the same time his nipples started losing their human colours as they slowly sank back into his chest. In contrast to this George's belly button filled with flesh and then scales smoothed the surface out.

The man anxiously scratched his head as he chuckled nervously, but his mood swung back to horror as he realised that his hair was loosening and detaching from his scalp. George frantically rubbed his head, only to feel it become completely bald in seconds.

"This is insane... I must be dreaming, I- Hmn-hphtfu...! Wha- My theeh! Gakh!" – George exclaimed in dread as he spat out tooth after tooth, until his gums became completely empty. George almost tripped over the bloody wet mess and the white pebbles all over the floor.

The man covered his mouth in horror and a familiar itching made him realise that his fingernails started falling out too as if they became completely useless for whatever he was becoming to function. At this point George's entire body was covered in all sorts of muted scales of predominantly green and brown colours.

George was starting to feel light-headed as all the changes proven to be too much for his human mind. He was losing all the little details that made him who he was. By now his face was losing its human appearance as his lips started peeling back and revealing his drastically changing maw.

“Fhruh! Shaaamhodhy heeeph! Ss- Sssssshy...!” – George hissed abruptly as his tongue started slimming down and narrowing to become a long and bendy mockery of its former self. The tip started to split into two tapered points, which made up an iconic reptilian fork of tongue.

He tried to cover his face in humiliation, but his hands failed him as the fingers started to contort and shorten. George’s eyes widened in dread as he watched his hands gradually turn into stubs without digits. George’s eyes started changing colours to predominantly sharp yellow and his pupils started to stretch into vertical slits of a reptile.

The man had enough cues, but his brain defied the reality and didn’t want to accept it. George felt how his extremities slowly lost their form and began to devolve into... Nothing literally as limbs weren’t necessary for snakes to function.

With an awful crunch George’s neck tilted upwards in its socket and forced the man’s head to face the ceiling. It was only one of many steps to realign George’s body into a more horizontal oriented form.

The man groaned in discomfort as his entire torso started stretching painfully. The vertebrae multiplied and grew to malform the human’s body into that of a serpent. It proven to be too much for the miserable human who finally collapsed onto the floor with a thud.

He used whatever remained of his hands to help himself crawl out of his former lower clothing. As he did he felt less of his lower legs with each movement as they shortened entirely to become stubs and then slowly begin to sink into his rear, which started smoothing down.

George felt a single warm tear slide down his scaly cheek, before both crying and sweating became anatomically impossible for the predominantly reptilian creature that George was at this point. His ears started burning as their cartilage began to disappear, until only earholes were left at the sides of his head. George stared cross-eyed as his nose started to widen and then flatten, the nostrils slowly turned into slits.

The man wasn't capable of making human sounds anymore and he only managed to hiss pitifully as what was left of his body started narrowing and becoming more tubular in shape as it lengthened. George's arms became incapable of movement as his shoulders suddenly snapped and started disappearing.

George writhed on the floor as something started pushing out of his rear, or rather his tailbone. The elongating and conical protrusion was a developing serpentine tail. It swayed up and down, before it started moving in all directions as it slowly reached its final length, which surprisingly wasn't as long as the rest of George's stretching body.

Just as the main sources of pain started to slowly ebb and disappear after the major changes, George felt a new sensation when his already somewhat altered organs started to churn inside his body and reform further.

George shook his increasingly snake-like head as he felt his anus migrate lower underneath his newly grown tail. That's when George realised that he didn't feel his genitals, they were just gone or so it seemed to him. With a wild swipe of his body George turned over onto his side and curled into a C to look down at what used to be his groin.

Where his cock and balls used to be there was only a slit now, but it was throbbing with anticipation and it seemed as if his junk was still changing inside it. Suddenly George noticed the scaly lips part and reveal the double-ended, reptilian cock that he now sported. It was shorter than it used to be and had barbs covering it whole almost.

It twitched several times from the pleasure of the scaly lips hugging it tightly and when the pleasure built into crescendo George started shuddering as he came with his hemipenes.

As his equipment calmed down and started retreating into the newly grown genital slit, something else started happening to the two openings that George had underneath his tail. They started pulling closer towards each other only to start fusing into one dual-purpose cloaca, which felt unbelievably pleasurable to George despite the circumstances.

The man was now almost completely a snake if not for the somewhat human shape of his head with so many reptilian features already plastered all over it.

George started hissing as his skull started flattening. The cranium was shrinking rapidly and forcing his brain to shrink into a tiny size compared to what it used to be. George's face started pushing out into a reptilian snout. It grew longer as the jaws readjusted to the new species standards. Venomous fangs pushed out of the bloody gums and the transformation slowly came to an end.

The human George was replaced by a huge snake that seemed to be a blend of many species that exist in nature. George knew well that he wasn't just a normal snake due to his size and especially his almost other-worldly transformation. George hanged his head low as he realised that he was hungry and if he wanted to survive he had to sate his altered stomach with raw meat...
