

D12 CAVES AND THEIR CONTENTS

SCROLL OF REVELATION #107

{1. Dragon's Maw} You've made a terrible mistake. This isn't a cave.

It's the open jaws of a sun-bathing desert dragon. {2. Werebear Den} Etched into the walls are the introspective thoughts of a farmer who seals themselves inside this cave on full moons to keep them from hurting anyone. {3. Cursed Flute} The cave mouth resembles a screaming devil's face with dozens of curling, flute-shaped horns. Sealed within is a blood-drenched flute carved from a paladin's rib bone. {4. Stone Gnomes} The rooftops of a forgotten gnomish town act as stairs down this steep jungle cave. Many of the homes still have petrified gnomes huddled together inside them. {5. Teleportation Circle} Only those who speak the language of the old druids have any hope of figuring out where it might lead. {6. Cult Altar} Carved into a massive crystal in the center of the cave that is stained with the blood of 100 tieflings sacrificed here by a zealous, angel-worshipping cult. {7. Mad Mage} Cradling themselves at the back of the cave is a manic sorcerer who went insane after they accidentally killed their entire family when they discovered their powers. {8. Blood} A babbling brook of blood trickles out of the cave mouth, originating from the corpse of a vampire hunter pinned to the wall with a wooden stake. {9. Magic Crystals} Clinging to the ceiling are 1d6 incredibly fragile crystals that, if properly removed, can store spells within them that are released when the crystal breaks. {10. Hibernating} Sleeping in the darkest corner is a grizzly drake in its final week of winter hibernation. {11. Cave Art}

This crude yet beautiful cave art was drawn by the first elves and seems to show a mountain-sized monster being trapped beneath the forest. {12. Hourglass}

What feels like only an hour watching the sands fall through the glass while inside this cave is actually 10 years of time passing outside of the cave.
