Joey felt happy since he visited the zoo after so many years recently. He was curious how much it changed during the past years and he was pleasantly surprised when he saw all the renewed enclosures and new animals. Kangaroos were amongst the few new species introduced there.

However not everything was well. The man must have caught a flu, or so he hoped as the symptoms seemingly reassured him in that diagnosis. They were getting worse however when the man wasn't able to fall asleep.

His skin was crawling and itching, his spine hurt and the pain radiated into all of his limbs. The man felt dizzy and similarly to as he felt when he was very sick a few years back, he barely had strength to move. The man was unaware that his humanity was slowly slipping away from him.

The changes started subtly as the man moved from side to side on his bed feeling increasingly uncomfortable. The flesh on Joey's belly started bubbling almost as it changed along with organs inside. The bellybutton slowly filled with flesh and disappeared without a trace. Similar stuff was happening to Joey's nipples as they became numb and started to flatten against Joey's chest until they disappeared fully.

It was hard to point out the changes without seeing them, Joey just thought that he was terribly sick. If not for how queasy he felt, he would have called an ambulance already. Especially as the pain in the man's spine kept getting worse.

The flesh that covered his tailbone was pressed tightly against it as the tailbone gradually reformed into the beginnings of a tail. Joey started groaning in pain as his spine began unfurling and pushing out into a stubby tail. There was more flesh forming around the base, which gave it a conical shape almost.

The man arched his spine and curled into a sort of protective ball as he felt his elongating tail slap his head. It was at this moment that the man realised that he was in more trouble than he initially thought. Joey gasped at the sight of his forming tail, which was thick with muscles and rather streamlined in shape, very much unlike the tail of a canine or feline for example – It was more unique.

Joey grabbed the tip of his tail with his hands and only managed to mutter out a curse word of surprise. The tail grew really long, but slowly stopped growing as the other changes started accelerating all over Joey's body.

The man gasped as he saw his fingers begin to contract and shorten. They were still there after their changes, but practically useless as they weren't even able to grasp at his tail anymore. The previously transparent fingernails were starting to push out into longer and sharper claws, which further reassured the panicked man that he was becoming some sort of an animal. Joey stared at his morphing hands in horror as the inner sides became almost jet black and leathery.

Joey gulped in distress when he felt his feet start to tingle. The tingling then turned into aggressive pain that made the man kick his legs from the sensations. The changes were far more drastic than the ones that happened to Joey's hands.

The bones inside his feet were forced to stretch and grow, turn more resilient too. What worried Joey more were his toes, especially the side ones as they started to shrink rapidly and then melt down to disappear completely. To counteract this the middle toes started growing way longer than the others. The toenails were growing too, turning thick and sharp. As was with Joey's hands, underneath his altering feet thick protective pads started to form from his flesh.

Joey tried to get up, but it was unbearably hard as his back was still altering and forcing him to remain in a hunched over position. The pain in the man's limbs didn't disappear as they continued to change. The itching all over Joey's body became less persistent as red and brown fur started covering his changing form.

Joey covered his face and to his utter horror he realised that it was changing as well. His nose was swelling bigger and becoming more streamlined against his face as the beginnings of a snout started to form. Joey closed his eyes as he felt his ears start lengthening and turning more sensitive. His teeth were throbbing inside the gums as they slowly became thicker and more fit for a herbivorous diet.

The discomfort and the shock factor was too much and the man abruptly passed out. His consciousness was finally at ease as he fell asleep in a way. Unluckily that didn't mean that the changes stopped. They continued even though the man lost track of them while unconscious.

A bizarre churning blossomed inside Joey's stomach and lower. It felt like his digestive tract was moving and changing length. More unsettling were the changes happening to the man's genitalia. Joey's testicles were turning rounder and the scrotum was becoming bigger as it started migrating higher and then passing past the manhood.

Joey clenched his teeth when he felt his penis move lower and closer towards the base of his tail, reoriented into an alignment unnatural for most mammals. Sensitive flesh was forming around Joey's increasingly aroused cock. The shaft started to change shape and become slimmer and pointier, only to soon disappear inside the forming genital slit.

The man tossed and turned as his anus started migrating closer towards the genital slit with the altered penis inside it. A cloaca started to form as the two merged into one. Albeit the cloaca was more than unique as it wasn't reptilian, but that of a mammal.

Joey yawned and finally woke up. The man wiped the sweat off his sloping forehead with his furry hand. "Thank God it was all a bad dream..." – He muttered to himself as he looked around his dark room, which reassured him that the transformation never happened.

Joey wanted to go back to sleep, but he realised that he was oddly horny. He didn't like masturbating, but for some reason he felt extremely aroused and his penis was stiffening as it slowly slipped out of the furry cloaca.

The man lazily reached out a hand to grab his shaft, but his leathery palm brushed against something else. Two oval orbs inside a furry sack circa where Joey's penis used to be. The man exclaimed in dread and disgust as he realised that he cupped his marsupial ballsack instead of his human cock.

"No, this can't be real!" – Joey said to himself. The man saw as his face slowly pushed out more into a full muzzle of a kangaroo. A gap formed between his incisors and his molars as the rest of his head started changing. The very skull was rapidly changing shape and becoming slimmer and longer.

Joey grunted in pain as his femurs started bending unnaturally for a human anatomy as his legs slowly turned into strong marsupial counterparts. In the meantime his arms became slightly shorter. The man slid off his bed and groaned for the final phase of his changes as he fully turned into a red kangaroo.

Joey knew that it wasn't a nightmare. He felt his long feet, saw his sharp claws and the black nose in his field of view. Having the thick tail for balance also felt strange, especially when the man decided to get up and the new appendage helped him with that.

Joey let out a marsupial bark and he soon heard a chatter behind the wall. The former man regretted making that sound as now the people could realise that his former self was gone, replaced by a male kangaroo stuck inside the house...
